

Welcome to Nagasaki!

Atomic Bomb Museum A-①

Using the latest visuals and sound equipment, the museum appeals to the tragedy of war and the preciousness of peace, including large-scale disaster-affected materials and a partial reconstruction model of Urakami Cathedral.

Peace Park A-②

A park built on the hill to the north of the center of the atomic bombing. In the park, there is a Peace Memorial Statue, a symbol of Nagasaki, a city of peace, praying for peace and mourning the victims of the atomic bombing.

Dejima A-③

For about 200 years during the national isolation period, it was the only window of trade in Japan that was open to the West. There are residences, cooking rooms, storehouses, and guardhouses on the island.

Confucius Temple B-①

Mausoleum is a fusion of architectural styles from southern and northern China. The 72 philosopher's stone statues and Confucius statues are all imported from China, and the museum displays national treasure-class cultural assets.

Oura Cathedral B-②

Oura Cathedral was the first church in Japan to officially accept Catholics. The church building is characterized by its Gothic design, with a stone exterior and beautiful stained glass.

Glover Garden B-③

Glover Garden is lined with Western-style buildings such as the mansion of the Englishman Glover, who contributed to the modernization of Japan.
